EXPENDITURES BY STATE GOVERNMENT

In view of the fact that all the newspapers who favored E. L. Phillips for governor have during the past few weeks been telling what a great saving the present administration has effected, it might be well to read some of the facts in the case.

The cost of state government in actual dollars and cents has not been reduced by the Phillips administration at all. This statement is justified by comparing the figures of the appropriations made available by the legislature for the coming year with the amount actually spent during the last two years," says the Madison State Journal.

"Eliminating the common school fund disbursements, agency transactions which do not involve anything in the way of expense to the state, and the revolving fund appropriations for the blunder twine plant, the present legislature will have made available, if the governor signs the few remaining appropriation bills before him, the sum of $23,853,600, or to be spent in the two year period beginning July 1, 1915, and ending July 1, 1917. Compared with this amount there was actually disbursed during the two years ending July 1 last, the sum of $23,334,750.43. There will actually be over half a million more available during the coming two years than was spent during the last two."

Continuing, the Journal says: "If agents of the treasury are to be $2,987,002, in the last biennium, and an estimated $3,466,174 for the coming biennium are added, the showing made is still more unfavorable, the totals being $27,325,774 for the coming two years, compared with $21,702,464 actually spent for the last two."

"The tabulated financial statement shows conclusively the shant in the claim of administration supporters that people have saved money. The amount to be spent is $27,325,774, compared with $21,702,464 actually spent for the last two."

"In a few instances the amounts given are estimates made by the finance committee. The total of these where the amount to be spent is definite, is not large, as the finance committee pared everything to the bone. In fact the amounts made available by the legislature were so small compared to the needs in many departments that the administration forces did not dare to stand on the appropriations made, opening up the treasury on the last day with an 'emergency' appropriation, unlimited in amount, to be used on the whim of three constitutional officers. No account whatever is taken of these. When the two year period is up several hundred thousand more may be added to the total given here.

Divers on the Job.

The divers that were at work on the water main across the river arrived in the city early on Thursday and immediately went to work at making the necessary repair. On their last trip here they found that the casting that had been made to fix the break in the pipe had a flaw in it, and the result was that when they attempted to tighten it up the casting broke, so that work had to be discontinued until another could be made. Some of our citizens have suggested that it would be better if the water pipe could be cast across the bridge, properly boxed in so that it would not freeze, and then in case of a break or any other trouble it would not be necessary to secure a diver in order to make repairs.

Another Ford Joke.

A farmer has been in the habit of selling a friend in the city a dressed hog at Thanksgiving time each year. Last fall the hog was not up to the standard and the friend mentioned the fact to the farmer. "I know it," said the farmer, "but I'll tell you how it happens. My wife looks after the hogs, and whenever feeding time comes she calls them by hammering on an old tin basin. This summer two of our neighbors bought Ford cars and now every time they pass the house the hogs think they are being called for feeding, and the poor things run themselves to death."

A Suggestion.

—If it seems hard to pay the premium on your life insurance read the advertisement of the First National Bank.

CONDITIONS AMONG THE FARMERS NOT VERY GOOD.

Many of the corn and potato fields in this section of the country present a very discouraging appearance since the two frosts that occurred in August. Some few fields escaped with apparently no damage at all, and some others were only slightly touched, but these are in the minority to a large extent. To look the matter over without going into it too close it would appear as if 85 per cent of all the corn, potatoes and beans had been killed, and whatever there are cucumbers they have apparently suffered even more.

Many of the farmers are cutting their corn and getting it into shocks as rapidly as possible, and most of those who have silos will make ensilage of it, although there are some who claim that frost corn is better if left to dry than it will be if stored in the silo, claiming that they have found that the ensilage made from frosted corn is not good feed for the cows.

Will Have a Flower Exhibit.

Nekoosa Times.—The annual flower and vegetable exhibit will be held in the school gymnasium Saturday, September 11. It will be Children's Day from start to finish. Prizes will be given for the best flower garden, vegetable garden, general collection of vegetables, general collection of vegetables, collection of wild flowers, arrangement of flowers and vegetables, single specimen of vegetables and for the best bird house built by the boys and girls. To arouse a still greater interest in the appearance of the village, prizes will be given for the best looking front and back yards, including the systems of parking to the roadway, well trimmed trees and shrubs and the arrangement of flowers and vines. The exhibit will be open to the public thru the day. Plants, cut flowers and fruit that can be brought to the gym Saturday morning for decoration and display will be appreciated by the committee in charge.

Local Boys Take Two.

The local baseball team played a double header with Stevens Point on Sunday, and it resulted in two straight for the home boys. The first game was a little loose jointed on the part of Stevens Point, as they are a new team, but they won the home plate eighteen times, while they succeeded in getting only two in the same time. In this game Devine struck out 14 men and got five hits in five times at bat.

The second game sounded a little more like baseball, and was won by Grand Rapids making four runs while the Stevens Point boys managed to squeeze two out of it again.

This puts Grand Rapids in the second place in the league, and the chances are that if there was enough playing to be done that they would occupy the top position.

Build Roads.

Wm. J. Bryan says that good roads are as good a preparation as we can make for war. That is the direct result of the movement of armies, provisions, etc. The National defense League wants appropriations for the army and navy at the rate of $450,000,000 a year, which in eleven years would amount to five billion dollars. A good road, he continues, would cost about $333 a mile, the five billions of dollars would build 150 such highways between the Atlantic and Pacific and enough north and south roads, 12 miles apart, to cross the country. No one ought to kick on "war preparedness" of that character. And there is no reason why we can't have it. The National government ought to be willing to give us a little boost on making good roads.—Antigo Journal.

Injured Near Mosinee.

Mrs. P. J. Peterson and the ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Turner of Moon were very seriously injured last Wednesday when Mr. Turner's automobile turned turtle on the Wausau road about three miles north of Mosinee, pinning all the occupants of the car except Mr. Turner under the car. The party was enroute to the Wausau fair and was composed of Mr. Turner and his two children and Mr. and Mrs. Peterson and their son.

The Turner boy was picked up unconscious. It was found that three of his ribs were broken and that he was also injured internally. Mrs. Peterson suffered the dislocation of her right shoulder and was also injured about the back. Mr. Peterson was also slightly injured about the back.

Expect a Good Crop.

Jacob Searis of Walker was in the city on Monday completing the arrangements for the picking of cranberries on the Searis Bros. marsh, which was to commence full blast on Tuesday morning. Mr. Searis stated that they would harvest between 2500 and 3000 barrels of berries. They will employ about 155 pickers, and about 35 rakers. If the weather is good, seeing the chance for picking were poor, she took off her white dress and donned a gingham one, so as to keep her white dress clean till she arrived at her destination, and proceeded her long hike arriving in the Point in time to see the circus in all its glory, and afterwards caught a ride home with relatives.

In this day and age a walk from here to Stevens Point is regarded as a feat for a man, to say nothing of it being accomplished by a young woman.

Biron Road Will Soon Open. During an interview with the County Highway commissioners on Monday that gentlemen stated that he expected to put a crew of men at work on the Biron road about Wednesday after which it will only be a short time before that thoroughfare will be open for use. The greater part of the concrete work was uncovered some time ago and has since been in use to a limited extent, although the filling has not been put in along the sides.

Will Serve Their Time. Wm. McNamee, Oscar Severen and Karl Hagenford, the three boys who were arrested last week for burglarizing the Reich Jewelry store on the 14th of last month, were on Friday taken to the reformatory at Green Bay to serve their terms. The boys had been kept in the county jail here until there was a vacancy at the reformatory.

SUPERVISOR FOR RURAL SCHOOLS

Chapter 531 of the Laws of 1915, repeals the County Board of Education Law and creates a committee of three to be appointed by the County Board.

The committee on Common Schools, the law provides that the Chairman of the County Board shall appoint the first Committee of Common Schools and those that he appoints hold their office until the County Board meets in November session, at which time the County Board of Supervisors proceed to elect one member for one year, one member for two years, and one member for three years to serve on this Committee on Common Schools.

Permanently to this law J. P. Seid, Chairman of the Wood County Board of Supervisors has appointed P. N. Christensen of the town of Lincoln, Robert Morris of the town of Arpin and H. H. Voss of the village of Nekoosa. This committee met at the Court House in Grand Rapids and organized on Tuesday, August 31st, as the law provides that they shall meet on the first Tuesday after their appointment, for organization. P. N. Christensen was elected Chairman, Robert Morris Secretary of this committee. The committee has appellate jurisdiction in regard to creating and dissolving, or consolidating school districts and in alternating school districts.

Section 17 of the law provides that this committee shall meet on the first Tuesday after their appointment and appoint a Supervising teacher to assist the County Superintendent in supervising the schools. The County Superintendent must file with this committee the names of three persons qualified to hold the position of Supervising teacher and from this list of three, the Committee on Common Schools shall select the Supervising teacher.

This Supervising teacher is to receive a salary of not less than $60 nor more than $80 per month for a period of ten calendar months and all necessary expenses incurred in the performance of his duties. The salary of the Supervising teacher is to be paid by the county for the first year and the county shall reimburse the county for the amount spent for the salary and expenses of the Supervising teacher. This money is taken from the Seven-tenths Mill tax by the state before this tax is distributed to the county. The salary of the Supervising teacher without an additional tax levied upon the people of the different counties.

The benefits to be derived from this Supervising teacher by the rural schools are inestimable. The Supervising teacher will enable the County Superintendent to keep more closely in touch with the rural schools and also enable him to direct and check up the work of the rural schools. The employment of a rural visiting nurse to visit the rural schools and homes.

At the present time Milwaukee and Sheboygan are the only counties in the state which have established a rural nurse work, but their experiences have proven the need and advantages of the work in such startling way that the growth of the movement seems assured. Within a year after the appointment of Miss Leenbohn, the first rural nurse in the state, the trustees of the Milwaukee County Sanatorium for Tuberculosis appointed Mrs. Fae Machette to cooperate with Miss Leenbohn. Indications are that Chippewa county will be the third county in the state to have a rural nurse service.

Some years ago, when the Wisconsin Tuberculosis Association made the first comprehensive rural survey of its kind ever attempted in the United States, the entire nation was shocked to learn the magnitude of tuberculosis as a rural problem. In ten out of twenty-two townships in Dunn County, all farming districts, the death rate from tuberculosis was found to be higher than the city of Milwaukee and twice as high as in eleven other cities previously surveyed.

Obtained Credit Here. Albert Rossier, a Paris banker and a cousin of E. H. Rossier of Springfield, who was here negotiating a loan for his bank in the interest of the French Government, sailed for France August 21, after obtaining a war credit for his country of more than 136,000,000.

The Paris banker has written his cousin here to find a Mr. Rossier to travel to the United States about the middle of June to obtain a war credit through his Paris bank. He was one of a number of other French financiers here on this mission. Mr. Rossier traveled in the eastern part of the United States and throughout the middle west, getting eastern and middle western bankers interested in French finances.—Stevens Point Journal.

Mr. Rossier also visited in this city and in America, he being a cousin to E. C. Rossier.

Not Why Not? A resident of Medford has been operating a motor on the Soo line, between Rib Lake and Chelusa, carrying passengers between the two places and charging 50 cents a trip. Replying to the district attorney of Taylor county, Attorney General Owen says the man has no right to do this without the consent of the railroad company, and the attorney general did not say so, but if a man has a right to run a motor car over a railroad track, why not a locomotive? And if a locomotive, why not a string of passenger cars?

Two Engineers Pensioned. Walter M. Gleason, who lives at Fond du Lac, and Scott Smith, whose home is at North Fond du Lac, are soon to be placed on the Soo line's pension roll. Both are engineers. Mr. Gleason has run an engine more than forty-four years, part of the time on the Chicago & North Western Road. Mr. Smith entered upon his duties as engineer in 1872. His first work was on the Pennsylvania Central. Both will be pensioned on their next birthdays.

Notice to R. F. U. Members.

INDIVIDUALS SHOULD MAKE AN ARTISTIC EFFECT.

There is no question but what a person who lives in a town year after year may in time become a trifle indifferent to the natural beauties of the place, the intelligence of its people and the advantages that the place offers over other communities that have been less favored by nature.

If one may believe the remarks made by visitors to Grand Rapids, this city impresses those from out of town in a most favorable manner. The beauty of the surrounding scenery and the magnificent water views along the river seem to never fail to bring forth expressions of wonder and admiration, and there must be some reason for this, as there are many places where much more money has been spent in beautifying the city than has been done at Grand Rapids, and yet these places attract only a passing notice.

In view of these facts the people of Grand Rapids should make an effort to do their share in the good work. There are a few of our streets that should be paved as soon as possible, and a little more care should be taken in keeping the river banks neat and clean, especially in the rear of the business houses on the east side, where some of the old residents contracted the habit years ago of throwing all the refuse that accumulated out of their back door, not caring whether it landed in the river or on the river bank to remain there until the high water came in the spring to wash it away.

It takes a little more work to keep things looking right, but in the long run it pays for the trouble.

SAY CITY CHILDREN ARE THE HEALTHIEST

That country children are from 10 to 20 per cent less healthy than city children, according to the report of the National Council of Education of the American Medical Association; that there are farmhouses in Wisconsin that are veritable nests of tuberculosis, the finding being held at the annual meeting of the association, which was held at the Hotel Wisconsin in Milwaukee, Wis., last week. The report is not always synonymous with health and strength and that there are many country people who do not know how to capitalize as health the fresh air, sunshine and wholesome food which they have in such abundance that they grow careless of its value—these are a few of the facts which are being called to the attention of the people of Chippewa county by Theo. J. Werle, the motoring lecturer at the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Tuberculosis Association. Supported by incidents gathered by Mr. Werle from his own experiences and from those of Miss Elizabeth Leenbohn and Mrs. Fae Machette of Milwaukee county, who are visiting in the county, the speaker said that the rural schools in the state of Wisconsin, they are arousing the residents of Chippewa county to the value of the rural nurse. No feature of the program outlined by Mr. Werle in his health lectures, designed to arouse the people to the need for an organized campaign against tuberculosis and all contagious diseases, has caused more comment and interested inquiry than the possibility of the employment of a rural visiting nurse to visit the rural schools and homes.

At the present time Milwaukee and Sheboygan are the only counties in the state which have established a rural nurse work, but their experiences have proven the need and advantages of the work in such startling way that the growth of the movement seems assured. GOOD ROADS MEETING IS HELD IN TOWN OF SIGEL

A good roads meeting was held in the town of Sigel last Wednesday evening, the meeting being held at the town hall. There were about fifty in attendance including those from this city, and some sensible discussions were held. Those present from the town seemed to be in favor of doing what they can to improve the roads in their town, and there is now a possibility that something can be done about this line.

The town of Sigel has been up against a pretty tough proposition in the matter of building highways. The road which runs from the town hall to the village of Sigel is in a very bad state of repair and it is always very little drainage it is always late in the spring the roads are very rough, so that there is hardly a day when they can be used with any degree of satisfaction.

The road that is used the most is the one between this city and Yonkers, and it is generally in pretty rough condition. Right in the village of Vesper it has been improved and is in fine shape, and there is another short stretch near this city that has been macadamized, but the remainder of the distance is generally a pretty tough proposition.

What 'Good is a Band?

The following was taken from an exchange: "Once in a while we hear a fellow carelessly say, 'What good is a band in a town, anyway?' Well, first take inventory of the fellow who made the remark. You may have reasons to allow the silly question to go unanswered. But regarding the remark more seriously, let us say that a good, up-to-date band is one of the most useful things a town or community can possess. It is one of the best advertisements a town can have. A good band marked the location on the map of many a town. Emerson says something about the town making a beaten path. Well, a good band will make a beaten path leading to a town beaten path, even though the town's other attractions may not be numerous. Every merchant and is benefited by a good band, especially a concert band. Hundreds of people come to town to hear the beautiful entertainments, and they combined shopping with this pleasure. The promoters of business and municipal enterprise always have the satisfaction of knowing that their civic department from time to time will be successful, because they have a first class band to lead the way and attract the crowd. The social functions of a community are more satisfactory and decidedly more pleasing because musicians equal to any occasion are right close by. A band composed of able players—like many bands in the state—is a tower of strength to any town or section of the country. It cultivates the public ear to high class music, and does it right at your own door. Every enterprising citizen will boast the band of his home town wherever he goes."

Will Have a Big Exhibit. F. Cranfield, secretary of the Wis. State Horticultural Society, reports that the exhibit for the coming year will be much bigger and better than last year. We have a fine crop of apples in Wisconsin and the leading growers will be on hand with boxes, barrels and plates of fruit. The state horticultural society is working actively with the newly created department of agriculture to make this the biggest and best fair ever held in Wisconsin. The horticultural society will spend over five hundred dollars on an exhibit on the fair to show Wisconsin people what can be done in fruit growing in their own state.

Among other things that will be shown in quantity will be the six acre apple orchard on the exhibit, the best for the commercial orchard, sprayed and unsprayed fruit, etc. The florists have also promised a better exhibit than ever before. Come and see the fair, it's our fair, yours and mine.

Young Woman Burned to Death. Mrs. Roy C. Hoffman of Merrill met a tragic death last Wednesday morning when she attempted to revive a fire in the kitchen stove with kerosene. It is not known just how the accident happened, but when her husband answered her call for help he found her enveloped in flames and before they could be extinguished she had been burned so seriously that she died within a short time. Mrs. Hoffman was a young woman and had been married a short time when she met her death.

L. M. Mathis received his new Maxwell touring car last week.

PLENTY OF HUNTERS BUT VERY FEW CHICKENS.

The hunting season opened up on Tuesday morning and everybody who could carry a gun and raise a dollar with which to buy a license went out bright and early to get an auto load of chickens. Altho the weather was quite warm for trapping thru the tall grass and weeds, many of the parties stuck at the work all day and some of them made a fair bag, altho there is no question but what birds are scarcer than they have been for years.

Out on the east marsh, which has had a late springing ground for years past, chick are very scarce and it was evident that many of the avocys had been broken up either by unfavorable weather early in the season or from some other cause, and hence the scarcity.

Reports from Nekoosa are to the effect that about the same conditions exist down in that neighborhood, and that many of the hunters returned the first evening with very little to show for their work. A great many are of the opinion that the cold weather the past spring and summer had a tendency to prevent the hatching of the eggs or else that the young birds died off from the cold and wet after being hatched. Anyway, the birds are not there this year, and hunters are pretty generally of the opinion that this would have been a good year to prohibit shooting altogether in this locality.

Advance in Prices.

Sporting goods dealers in this city have recently received notes from the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. that the price of guns, rifles and ammunition has been materially advanced. The new retail prices which become effective at once, will be about as follows: Shot gun shells with ballistite powder have been increased from 75 to 80 cents per box of 25 medium game shells and 25 black powder shells, from 65 to 70 cents per box; black powder shells, from 50 to 55 cents. In shot guns, $21.60 grades will be advanced to $23.50; $23.50 guns to $25.50; rifles, $8.50 to $11; and $16.88 to $18, and $22 to $26. Although this notice of change has come only from the Winchester people, the Remington, Marlin, Stevens and other manufacturers of high grade guns and ammunition will undoubtedly advance their prices proportionately.

Nissen-Sweet.

Miss Hazel Nissen and Mr. William Sweet were married at 8 o'clock Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. H. C. Logan of the Methodist church performing the ceremony that made them man and wife. They were accompanied by Miss Anna Nissen and Mr. Roy Sweet as bridesmaid and groomsmen.

Both of these young people were raised in this city and have made their home here all their life and will be a most estimable lady. Mrs. Gulie Smart and Earl Price of this city were children of the deceased, and another daughter was Mrs. Charles Jensen of Neenah, with whom she has made her home for several years past. The funeral was held on Sunday at Neenah.

Death of Mrs. Price. Mrs. Kate Price died at the home of her daughter in Neenah on Thursday after an illness of several years. Deceased was well known to the older residents of this city, having lived here for several years, and was a most estimable lady. Mrs. Gulie Smart and Earl Price of this city were children of the deceased, and another daughter was Mrs. Charles Jensen of Neenah, with whom she has made her home for several years past. The funeral was held on Sunday at Neenah.

Rudolph Farmers Attention. There will be a good roads meeting held in Krebsbach hall at Rudolph on Friday evening, September 10. The Good Roads Booster Club of Grand Rapids will be present and a good interesting meeting is assured. This meeting is for the farmers and it is the wish of the Club that every farmer of the community be present. Matters of importance to the town will be brought up and will be fully discussed and if you have any ideas on good roads bring them in. Adam Zimmerman, Chairman.

Garage Business Sold. George Huntington and Plummer Steen have bought out the garage business from D. M. Huntington, and will continue to operate the place the same as heretofore.

The elder Mr. Huntington intends to divide his time between his place up river and this city, his retirement from the garage business giving him more time to look after his farming interests.

County Clerk Kept Busy.

Altho Monday was a legal holiday and one of the occasions when the county officers are supposed to take a day off it was the busiest day of the season at the office of the county clerk. Mr. Kolbe suspected that the night be a few persons who had neglected securing a hunting license until the last day, and was right, for he issued about 300 on that day.

Shot While Hunting. Frank Shank of the town of Grant, had about 15 years of age was accidentally shot by a companion on Tuesday morning while chicken hunting. The charge hit the boy in the right arm and breast but did no serious damage. A physician from this city was called to attend the young man.

H. F. Kell entertained his brother, who is located at Wausau several days the past week.

The Strange Adventures of Christopher Poe

Stories of Strange Cases Solved in Secret by a Banker-Detective

By ROBERT CARLTON BROWN

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

AT THE MANICURE SHOP

For a period of several weeks Christopher Poe had enjoyed the let-down of routine desk work. He had resumed his usual workday life after having spent a hand of counterfeits at Coney, and classifying their histories in "Volume H" for future reference.

One Monday morning he sat at his desk opening mail, a chance visitor dropped in with the alarming news that a mutual friend, Boudinot Riggs, was dead.

"Boudinot dead?" cried Poe, jumping up. "That light outer coat over his suit, off suit, off Oxford style. 'I must go there directly.'"

"Poisoned, too, Doctor Robinson says. Just met him on the way home to make a test of Boudinot's good blood," said the informant, a fellow-banker.

Christopher Poe waited for nothing else. Old Boudinot Riggs was a distant relation, a temperamental dilettante, sort of a cat, grown-up bad boy, who had inherited a fondness for beauty and indolence, together with something between three and four million dollars which yielded money instead of work. Boudinot had been a household name in as he was by a household of women, including a kindly old dependent who nursed him, a somewhat stern sister who despised him, a young lady secretary who took the place of a business man's stenographer, and a raft of interested outsiders.

Three of these dependents were most important in his life—Mrs. Groves, the nurse, because she mothered him, Miss Riggs, his sister, because she bothered him, and Miss Mignon Moquin, because she was the only one who could get him to do anything. He was the only one who could get him to do anything. He was the only one who could get him to do anything.

"It was this second mail who opened the door to Christopher Poe that afternoon of Boudinot's death. It was Mrs. Groves, the nurse, red-eyed and trembling, who pressed Poe's hand with sincere emotion and led him to Miss Riggs, who had just been called back by the news of her brother's death from Yonkers, where she had come on a visit that morning.

"Poe took the cold hand Miss Riggs thrust out to him mechanically. "I don't think there's anything I can do," he said.

"No, everything is quite all right," said Boudinot's friend and nurse. "I thought—"

"As for your being his banker," she said, throwing up her head abruptly. "I'll attend to that after this. Perhaps you don't know that Boudinot came to his senses last night, and changed my name for Miss Moquin's in that silly will of his!"

"No!" cried Poe in surprise, glancing at Mrs. Groves, whose eyes were so big and somber and sad, as though with a concealed story, she asked sharply, "Did you know of this?"

The nervous, blushing little woman looked straight at Miss Riggs, and said in a direct, level tone:

"If you hadn't slandered Miss Moquin and—have driven him to it, he wouldn't have done this. This morning when you said you wished he was dead, and slammed the door in his wheel-chair, he took the truth last night!"

Miss Riggs drew up her thin, cordy neck, and swallowed hard as Mrs. Groves paused before continuing in a higher key:

"I've kept quiet in this hell of a house long enough!" She trembled with emotion. "I was the only one that ever took care of him; I saw that his eggs were poached, just so; I nursed him when his foot was so bad he swore at everybody!"

"And you're well paid for it!" snapped Miss Riggs in a voice that sounded like a slap in the face. "He left you half a million."

"Mrs. Groves' face had bunched together in an agonized grimace. "How can you talk like that, with him lying there!" she cried. "It isn't money I'm speaking of, though God knows he wouldn't have left me a cent if he'd listened to the things you said against me."

"You lie!" screamed Miss Riggs in tremendous rage.

"Miss Riggs' put in Poe calmly, touching her softly on the shoulder. "Your brother," he indicated the adjoining room. "This will rest till later, when—"

"Oh, I don't care about him. What did he ever do for me?" she burst out violently, a hysterical, dry sob escaping her.

"Try to calm yourself, Miss Riggs," Poe put in softly, adding in a casual tone, "Have they found yet what kind of poison was used?"

"Poison!" Miss Riggs jumped to her feet, drew her arms down from an effort at self-control, her face went dead white, and she glanced quickly from Mrs. Groves to Poe, both watching her keenly.

"Well, what kind of poison do they think it was, and who do you think did it?" she asked in a dry voice, each word an effort.

"Oh, it hasn't gone that far," said the banker in a concerned tone. "I learned of it from a friend, and stopped to see Doctor Robinson before I came here. He was making a test of the blood; said as far as he'd gone all indications pointed to prussic acid.

"Prussic acid?" cried Miss Riggs, and Mrs. Groves hovered closer, looking from one to the other with awed, hallow eyes.

"Yes, three grains of which, less than a drop, absorbed by the blood will cause death," said Poe calmly, his eyes on the carpet, though he saw Miss Riggs glance furtively at Mrs. Groves and her expression grow hard.

"Then Miss Moquin distilled being out of the will?" She forced a laugh.

"You mean you think she—"

"Either Miss Moquin or his nurse," she pointed an unsteady finger at Mrs. Groves.

"Oh, I'm sure you're quite too wrought up by the announcement to make a judgment. I have been more thoughtful." There was shrewdness in Poe's tone.

"Mrs. Groves put a timid hand on his arm, and asked anxiously:

"Who do you think did it, Mr. Poe?"

"My dear lady, I only wish I knew," said Poe vibrantly, adding, "We all said we knew, didn't we, Miss Riggs?"

"She replied sullenly:

"I don't care who poisons Boudinot, not I, only if that little French manicure did it it would confirm my opinion of her."

"Where is her place?" asked Poe casually. "Is she near here?"

"Ask Mrs. Groves," said Miss Riggs, and Mrs. Groves, who had been generally wheeled him, dropped her eyes sullenly as Poe looked at her.

"Not two blocks away, just at the corner, on Broadway," replied Mrs. Groves with eager promptness.

Poe picked up his hat, saying, "If I can do anything, you will feel free to call on me, won't you, Miss Riggs?"

"The blondest, aristocratic woman rose, and fixed her beaming eyes on him.

"There won't be anything," she said, decidedly. "Boudinot will be buried at once, and I shall take my money and go to Europe to live the rest of my life."

"I hope you may," said the banker, bowing.

"Oh, the state might make inquiries," he turned to explain, "that is, if Boudinot was really poisoned. It might detain you."

"I don't see how they could detain me," she cried. "Why, I wasn't even here when he died."

"But you hadn't left home more than an hour or so before; when the state makes an inquiry, it is apt to want to keep track of everybody immediately concerned, but I hope if there is an investigation you or Mrs. Groves—"

As he stepped into the hall, Mrs. Groves bowed solicitously near, and asked in an awed whisper:

"Would you like to see the body?"

"Not now, later, if I will," he said, thinking I would be asked to see the body, and step out into the room.

As Doctor Robinson had already told him, there was not a single bodily indication of how Boudinot Riggs had died; not a bruise, not a scratch.

While Mrs. Groves answered a call to another part of the house, Poe made a hasty but minute examination of the exposed skin, finding but little on his mind.

Then, a worried look expressing itself in the two thoughtful grooves joining his nostrils with the corners of his lips, he left the house abruptly, and crossed to Broadway, where, from a booth in a corner drug store, he called up his friend Doctor Robinson, with whom he sometimes worked.

"Hello, this is Poe," he said, on getting the doctor at the other end of the wire. "Found out for sure."

"Yes, no doubt at all," Dr. Robinson said. "I used the ammonia-tartrate sulphate test. Probably not more than three grains absorbed. I should say," came the answer.

"Do you think he drank it?"

"No. There was no odor of it about his mouth, but the blood showed it. I can't imagine how it was introduced. There wasn't a scratch on his body, as I told you."

"Delay reporting it for two hours, will you?" It may save some trouble to several people."

"On your say-so, of course, Poe. Got anything to work on?"

"Not much so far. Let's see, it's about three o'clock now. Say six thirty. Be at home then?"

"Yes. Come to dinner."

"If I feel I can finish and turn over the right person without outside help, I will; otherwise I'll phone you."

"Goodbye."

"He hung up the receiver and left the booth, stopping to put a half-dozen orange-wood sticks at the counter.

While the druggist was waiting on him, Poe asked if there was a manicure shop in the neighborhood.

"Miss Moquin's, on the opposite corner," the druggist nodded through his window. "The news stand is right in front of it there."

"I see. Thanks. The name sounds French!" He raised his brows questioningly.

EUROPEAN CAVES and EARLY MAN

By N. C. NELSON
FROM THE AMERICAN MUSEUM JOURNAL

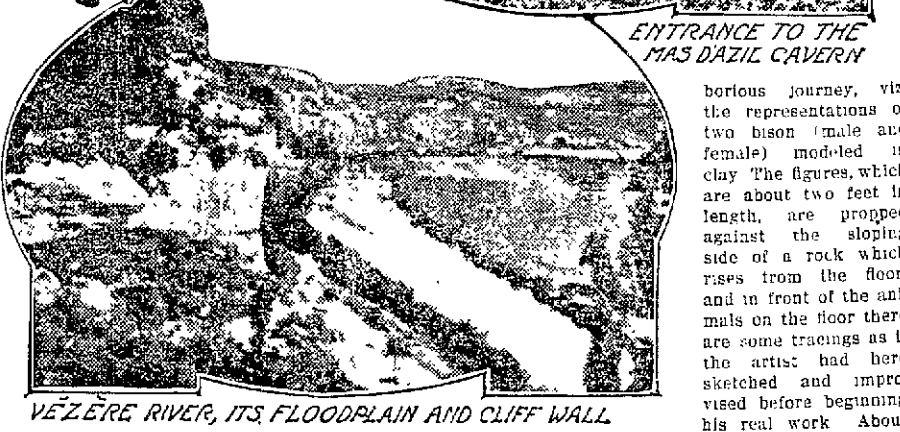

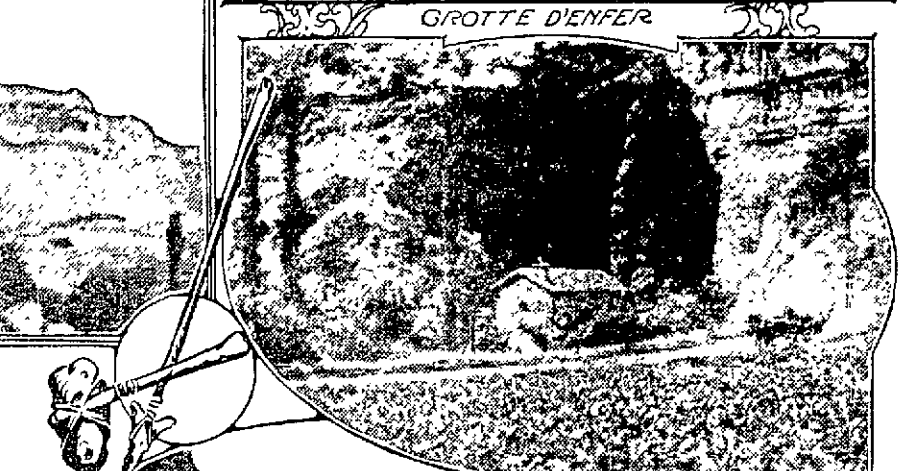

IDENTIFICATION IN LIMESTONE CLIFF TO SHELTER EARLY MAN

HERE are recorded at the present time for the southern two-thirds of Europe, including Mediterranean Asia and Africa, no less than four hundred paleolithic stations, that is, places where remains of our kind or another have been left behind by early man. This man was primarily a hunter and his chief center of activity appears to have been on the valley terrace of the Thames and the Somme, but the majority of the sites, especially those of later times, are sheltered in some way. The shelter may consist merely of an overhanging cliff, it may be a grotto yawning on the mountain side and it may be the interior of a cave. This latter type of site is relatively easy to find by making a deliberate search while the location of an ancient camp or workshop in the open country is the result only of chance. It is conceivable of course that these roaming, migratory hunters returned seasonally to the natural shelters, but on the other hand, it is possible that many of them built huts—some of the geometric cave paintings suggest that they did—and unless these huts stood in very close proximity to some sheltering cliff, all traces of the spot and its relics would be lost. Hence, we may properly take for granted that hundreds of archaeological stations will remain undiscovered, in consequence of which our notion of the actual strength of the population at any given place during these early millenniums of human existence must continue imperfect, if not inadequate.

As need hardly be stated the presence of natural habitations depends ordinarily on a high relief or a more or less mountainous topography. Caves are most abundant in volcanic regions as in the western United States, or in limestone areas such as Kentucky and adjacent commonwealths. Shelters are notable features of steep-walled valleys or box canyons and our own cliff-dweller region affords the best example of them and their utilization. In Europe the most famous cave groups are located in the lower French Pyrenees and their Cantabrian extension in northern Spain, while the equally famous shelter region includes short sections of the Vézère and Dordogne valleys in Les Eyzies. In the French department of Dordogne these regions are wonderfully picturesque and impressive, and have some attractions in the flora they have not changed much in general appearance since the arrival of paleolithic man. These caves and shelters are all in limestone formations and are the results chiefly of mechanical erosion. Some of the caves, especially those of the lower altitudes, are still in process of making, while others, well up on the mountain sides, are very ancient—in fact, were in their old age when man first entered them.

Roughly speaking, the shelters proper, that is the overhanging cliffs and the wide open grottoes were the homes of paleolithic man and therefore naturally furnish us with important data concerning his physical make-up, his practical ability, and the general nature of his everyday life. The caves on the other hand, served him mainly as galleries for a remarkable series of paintings, engravings and carvings, which in a measure reveal to us his mental attitude toward life. The caves, it must be understood, were exceedingly dark and damp, ordinarily unfit for habitation, except possibly as temporary retreat during the hard winters, and, contrarily, the shelter walls, having been exposed for thousands of years to the weathering elements, could not have preserved for us either paintings or delicate engravings that may have been made upon them. There are several somewhat qualifying exceptions to these sweeping statements however. For instance, the Gargas cavern, near Montreuil, France, and likewise the Altamira cave, near Santander, Spain, appear to have been occupied for protracted periods, although in both cases only very close to the entrance. On the other hand, some of the shelters such as Cap Blanc, near Les Eyzies, France, have preserved, mainly through accident, a fine series of high relief sculptures. But as a general thing the cave sites are in large halcyon shelters, usually facing the sun, while the entrances to the painted caves face in any direction. The latter for the most part are very small and inconspicuous. At Castillo only there is the perfect combination—a large, sunny grotto, which was occupied periodically throughout most of paleolithic times and which served besides as the vestibule to a considerable cave, famous for its mural art.

An examination of the various Dordogne shelters, coupled with a study of the changing types found in them, is most instructive. Nearly all of the shelters here are at the base of the high cliffs that hedge the narrow valleys on one or both sides; but in a few instances the relic-bearing debris lies on an eroded ledge some distance up the face of the protecting wall. Almost within thorship of Les Eyzies are a series of stations which taken together furnish data on human history practically from Acheulean times to the present day. These stations begin with the old obsidian shelter of La Micoque, includes the partially ruined shelters of Upper and Lower Laugerie; another ledge-shelter that served old-time brigands as a rendezvous and also as a fortress to defy the English in 1410; still another ledge marked by ruins of what looks like some old baronial chateau; and end up finally with the more or less well-kept houses of the modern peasant. These houses often stand on several meters of ancient relic-bearing debris and seem to cling in an infantile sort of way to the overhanging cliff in spite of its cold, damp interior. Some distance up the Vézère, at the Rock of St. Christopher, where the last houses have been removed, there are over four meters of debris dating from neolithic to present time, and the adjacent cliff is marked by several series of parallel holes, cut for the insertion of ceiling beams, precisely as we find them in our own Southwest. Some of these holes are high up the cliff, but others are below the surface of the accumulated debris, which is itself below the high-water mark of the river. With all this evidence suggestive of continuous occupation, it is not to be wondered at that some students profess to see among the local inhabitants a number of individuals that resemble the physical type of paleolithic man.

A visit to the painted caves is the experience of a lifetime, but while it is an adventure bound to excite more enthusiasm than the examination of the shelters, it is less instructive and certainly less convincing. It is like an undertaking fraught with some difficulty and disappointment, except perhaps in such cases as Altamira, Niaux and Font-de-Gaume. The painted and incised representations on the cave walls are seldom so plain and striking as one might infer from the superb reproductions in the published reports, and to make them out the visitor must take time. In this effort to decipher, he is most ably assisted by Prof. Emile Cartailhon-Poncelin, who has given a good part of his life to the study of paleolithic art and who as present guards nearly all the Pyrenean caverns. In Spain and in the Dordogne country, however, local guides must be taken, and as these are not always competent, the student who would profit by his opportunity must prepare himself beforehand in regard to what is to be seen and then, insist on being shown, or he may not see much.

The last cave to be discovered, and also the most beautiful, is the Tuc d'Audoubert, located on the estate of Count Begouen, near Saint-Girons, France. This is perhaps the most difficult cavern to explore. But to risk passage in the improvised boat that the visitor must sail in order to reach the interior, and to crawl on his stomach along muddy passages that are really too small for a full-grown man, and finally to receive innumerable bumps on his head from pendulous stalactites is not too much to pay for the privilege, which, as it happened, was accorded the Museum's representative as the first American to see the wonders inside. Ordinarily, the natural wonders of the caverns are more or less disclosed with mud, but here is gallery after gallery of bewildering forests of pillars and pendants and posts—all a pure white and glittering as if studied with myriads of diamonds. Here and there the stalactites hang in large sheets like folded draperies and by placing a light behind them the translucent substance flashes up in colors of green and rose too beautiful to be described. No fairy palace was ever more adorned! You are led along devious passages, stepping again and again in lakelets of invisibly clear water, and when on foot footing you are warned to move circumspectly for fear of obliterating some ancient human footprints that are faintly visible under the thin coat of stalagmite which covers the clay floor. Bones and skulls of the giant cave bear and other animals lie all about, cemented in place. Finally, near the extreme inner end of the cavern, comes the real object of the last bird was sent to Abilene, Tex., 1,019 miles (air-line measure) from Fort Wayne. The bird was liberated at 4:30 a. m., July 11, 1913, and homed at 4 p. m., July 12, the flying time being one day, eleven hours, thirty minutes, and six seconds. In this same race a bird belonging to Mr. John Schilling homed at 11:39 a. m., the following day (July 13), and a third bird, belonging to Mr. F. Nabholz, a half hour later. All of the above races were down under the rules of the American Homing Pigeon union. The best previous record for one thousand miles was made by a pigeon belonging to H. Beech of Fort Wayne, in 1912, the time being two days, nine hours, and some odd minutes. And this record was set the time made in 1910 by a bird belonging to Mr. L. Gehfert of the same city, this time being three days, eleven hours and some odd minutes. Such records will probably never be beaten except by happy combinations of strong favorable wind and clear, warm weather.—Harpers Magazine.

RELIEF FROM HOT WEATHER

Refreshing Baths That Will Do Much to Mitigate the Effect of the Sun's Rays.

These hot days when you go home from work, tired out, hot, uncomfortable from excess sweating, and generally irritable, your impulse is to seek something restful. It may be a hammock or chair under a shady tree, it may be an ice drink of some kind, or it may be a ride in the trolley or motor car. All of these things help providing in taking cool water or lemonade you sip the drink slowly and do not take it in large gulps, as is usually done. A better plan, however, is to take a bath of a kind that will not only cool the body, but also refresh it. A hot tub bath is best, for it rests the body, increases the destruction of fatigue poisons, relieves the irritation and gets the body in a state where restful sleep will come readily. By the term "hot bath" we usually mean an ordinary full bath given at a

Better Than a Legacy

By FLORENCE HENDERSON

(Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

"I am glad of it!" spoke Harley Blake, and he looked as if in dead earnest, as he spoke. "The money! The money!" He was scouted before the cold and empty drapery of his cheerless room. He made a faint glow of heat and warmth, however, by striking a match and lighting the letter he had just received and read. He dropped it to the hearth and watched it curl up into fragile sheets of black and then at a breath go crumbling into fragments.

"The last bridge burned," he mused, trying to smile half humorously, but the situation was too serious. "I have exhausted my friends and relatives. The former gave me promises of influence and help and I have failed. My father's own brother wrote me a homely on independence and thrift, and would not even risk giving me a recommendation of capability and honesty. That letter is the last straw that breaks the camel's back. Good-by to the old life for good!"

But there Harley hesitated mentally. He was poor in pocket, thought and expectancy, but love is rich and he loved Helen Wendell. They had been more than friendly, but that was before she had gone away on a long trip to the Panama canal with her scientific father—before Harley had tried to make his way in life in a practical way, and had failed.

He had not heard from her since when poverty and lack of work had fastened their insupportable grip upon him, he had cut loose perforce from the social circle in which Miss Wendell moved. He had not even heard if she had returned. Strangely, however, he recalled a certain dinner he had had with her. It had been a leading party, and he had been asked to give the toast. He had been asked to give the toast. He had been asked to give the toast.

"A great uncle, that 'miser'! Many a time Harley had reflected, somewhat bitterly. "He insists on four years of the college agricultural course, and then tells me to follow medicine, or some other respectable profession. Why don't he give me a farm?" But now, cutting loose from all the past life, as he proposed to do, he had money in his pocket. Harley packed his best clothes in a suitcase, bade his landlady good-by and proceeded to the street. There was a grim unpromising glitter in his eye as he proceeded to a second-hand clothing store. When he came out of it, Harley was arrayed in a coarse common working suit and had a few dollars in cash as a result of a sale of his few belongings.

His next stop was at a laborers' employment bureau. Its proprietor started at this white-handed, refined-faced, applicant who indifferently announced that track work, mining, farm work, in fact any line of manual employment would be acceptable. Harley was required to pay a fee of two dollars. Then he was given a card. It read, "Superintendent of Construction, Alleghen, Pa." He was handed a bit of pasteboard.

"That is a pass to your destination," advised the agency. "When you arrive there apply for grading work—$1.75 a day and board."

"That sounds tangible!" nodded Harley gratefully, and took his departure. "It's work," he murmured with himself. It will keep me from becoming a pauper—and it will make me forget!" But adverse fortune seemed to pursue the victim. It had kept tramping the streets for several weeks looking for the position he never found.

He arrived at Alleghen to find work at a standstill and the railroad in the hands of a receiver. Some two hundred workmen had dispersed, or were dispersing about the immediate vicinity. The farmers in the district were starving, and the city was a little rest for them needed workers in the fields, and under the exigencies of the occasion were able to bargain at their own figures. Harley was quite glad of the new prospect opened. He preferred farm work. Then came a new disappointment. The railroad laborers had two days' start of him. The labor market was glutted. Every place at plow and harrow was filled. "Oh, well, I shall have to strike out for a new field, that is all," he told himself grimly, trying to fancy he was imbued with the optimism of an enthusiastic ambition.

Harley tramped it, brave as a Trojan, for two days. On the morning of the third he met his first bit of encouragement. He had come upon a desolate, starved-looking farm and hailed its equally dilapidated owner watered down, disconsolate cattle. The man himself was grim-faced and dispirited in mien and talk. "I might give you board and lodging for a week's work," he said ungraciously.

"I'll take that, if it's only to get my hand in," agreed Harley cheerfully. "But say, what's struck the place?" "A sucker!" growled the man, whose name was Evans. "The sucker is me. I lost my wife and wanted a lonely life. I've got it. Traded a nice village home for this—farm, they called it. Look at it!"

"It does look forlorn, for a fact," observed Harley, "but what's the main subject of encouragement? Ah, I see the soil," scooping up a handful of the loose, yellow dirt, scanned it, closely, tasting it, smelling it, and tossing it aside with a thoughtful, "Humph! Got any loose capital?"

"What if I have?" demanded the farmer, surlily and with suspicion. "Because, if you have, and will invest it in time and phosphates, I'll make a cash-on-hand contract to do the rest that will make this place a garden of Eden inside of two seasons on a basis of fifty and fifty."

"Uncle won't so bad, after all!" many a time later Harley soliloquized. He threw schooling, money and soul into his first and grand chance at scientific farming. At the end of two years he had made a contented man of his employer and a proud, happy man of himself.

So proud and happy, in fact, that one day, notwithstanding the fact that he had put the past all behind him, in an idle, whimsical mood he ventured writing a letter to Helen Wendell. He told her the simple story of his endeavors, he told her that a wayward impulse had led him to hope that she would not forsake their old friendship and would be interested in knowing that a small but cheering measure of success had come to him.

He hoped for a reply, but none came in the form of a letter. A week went by, and one morning as he started for the well a farmer's rig drove up and Helen Wendell alighted.

She was in mourning, a little careworn, a little older, but the old true eyes looked as earnestly as of yore into the longing depths of his own, as he said: "Is this the promised response of two years ago?"

"Am I welcome?" she asked simply. His glowing lips, pressed to her willing ones, answered.

FAITHFUL TO HIS MASTER

Von Buelow's Chief Not One Who Would Desert Him in His "Time of Misery."

Prince Buelow, whom the Kaiser sent to Rome on what has proved to be a disastrous special mission, has a fund of anecdotes, and has been heard to tell this amusing story. In which the "all highest" plays a leading part. Some years ago, when he was waiting for the ambassadorship at Rome to take up the post of chancellor of the empire, he summoned his cook, a veritable cordon bleu, to tell him of the change. "We shall not live in our present grand style," he said, "but on a much smaller scale. Perhaps, therefore, you would prefer to leave me another place." The cook, doubtless imagining that financial disaster was impending, remained silent for a few moments, then with the air of one about to perform a sympathetic relief replied: "Well, excellency, I am gripped at hearing such melancholy news, but I shall remain in your service. Whatever may happen to you, I shall be with you. I have devoted my life to your time of misery!" At dinner one evening the prince told the story to the Kaiser, who had had personal experience of the culinary chef's skill, and was highly amused at the prince's anecdote. So interested, indeed, did the emperor be at the cook's story, shortly afterward he sent the worthy fellow a handsome gold watch, on the lid of which was engraved the one word "Misery," by which name his majesty ever afterward laughingly spoke of and addressed him.

Activities of Women.

One woman in every fifteen in the United States is in business. Two babies are born in Germany for every one born in France. Nellie Barker is Chicago's champion runaway girl, having asserted her parents once a week for the past year.

Miss Neysa McMein, the well-known illustrator of front covers for magazines, earns over $5,000 a year from her own work.

Miss Eva Ramstedt, a former pupil of Mrs. Curie, the radium expert, has been appointed professor of radiology at the University of Stockholm.

Although he is past sixty-two years of age, Miss S. D. Wallace of near Indianapolis, Ind., has again secured an annual fishing and hunting license.

A depiction of Russian women have asked permission from the government to form a volunteer legion to serve as regular soldiers. These women assert that they are ready to assume all military duties except actual engagements in battle and are particularly desirous of being employed for patrol service.

The Modern Correspondent. "Our war correspondent got in this morning," said the managing editor. "That's good!" exclaimed the chief. "What picture did he bring back?" "He has about thirty-eight snapshots of himself in striking poses and two or three of generals."

Usually when people say nice things about a man he is too dead to appreciate them.

It takes at least sixteen summers to make one summer girl.

The General Says:

Know why and know how are essential to any success. Every one of us has to acknowledge that the same sort of military preparedness that fits a man for his defense is the most effective principle in making an industry of any kind successful and profitable both to manufacturer and consumer.

Certain-teed

ROOFING

This roofing certainly has no superior. It is the best roofing that can possibly be made and it is manufactured in and guaranteed by the largest Roofing and Building Paper Mills in the world. It is fully guaranteed 5 years; 24, 10 years, and 30 years, 15 years, and this guarantee means the minimum life of the roofing. It is made of a pure asphalt and is not of the country are outliving the period of the guarantee.

When the General first entered the field the cost of roofing was two or three times more than it is today and the quality was not as high as Certain-teed is today. By reason of his enormous output the General has not only been able to bring down the cost and selling price of his roofing, but he has also been able to raise the quality to its maximum. Today every fifth roll of roofing sold bears the Certain-teed label.

Certain-teed roofing, shingles, wall boards, felts, building papers, etc., bearing the General's name, are sold by your local lumber or hardware dealer at very reasonable prices. Don't send your money away for these goods. Patronize your home dealer.

SOME HINTS FOR BUILDERS

Great Care Should Be Taken in Selection of the Most Substantial Roofing Material.

If you were without preparation or plan, reduced to a state of helplessness, your first thought would be of food supply and your next of shelter, for these are the two most vital necessities of mankind. It is therefore natural that the best thought, and study are put upon these two essentials.

More forward steps have been taken in the building industry in the past fifty years, as regards comfort, service and architectural beauty than in the fifty years previous.

Only in recent years has the handling of cement in building work been understood properly, and progress is still constantly being made with it. Modern hotels and office buildings are being equipped with elevators, mail chutes, and other conveniences. Nearly every important change in building construction is away from the fire hazard of wood.

One of the most significant developments of recent years is the crushed slate surfaced asphalt shingle which is, on new construction and old, rapidly supplanting the wooden article. There are many reasons for this. The slate surfaced shingles add beauty to any building—in fact, there is really no comparison from an architectural standpoint. Crushed slate of pleasing tints of red or green, is employed as a surfacing. The shingles are uniformly eight inches wide and are exposed four inches to the weather. No painting is necessary as the red or green crushed slate is natural and therefore cannot fade.

The purchaser, however, should guard himself against buying a slate surfaced shingle that is not guaranteed by a reliable and responsible manufacturer. There are so many kinds of roofing and shingles on the market today each claiming to be the best that it becomes necessary for the buyer to get some satisfactory assurance that the roofing or shingles are represented honestly.

Dodging an Issue.

"Do you know where I can buy any counterfeit money?" inquired the man with a suitcase.

"Are you looking for trouble?"

"No. But I'm against the tipping off and at the same time I want to go through the formalities and avoid being made uncomfortable by the waiters."

A Medical Book Free

By Dr. N. A. Goddard

Modern Methods of treating Chronic Diseases without Operation, has just come from the pen of Dr. Goddard the Milwaukee Specialist and is one of the most interesting as well as instructive little books the doctor has ever written.

If you are a sufferer from Appendicitis, Rupture, Gall Stones, Colic, Goitre or Chronic diseases of a private nature, you should avail yourself of his offer to send you this valuable little book free simply for the asking. A postal will bring it to you, in a plain wrapper. Many so-called surgical diseases have been proven to be curable by medical treatment, more safely, more easily and cheaply by modern medical methods than was believed possible a few years ago.

After you have read this little book you can consult Dr. Goddard on his monthly visits to Grand Rapids, free of charge and have the satisfaction of knowing that you have secured the expert opinion of a reputable specialist in these matters. If you have been advised to submit to an operation, surely do not fail to consult him before undergoing such an operation. His advice may save you many weeks of suffering, loss of time and expense, possibly your life. Dr. Goddard will visit the Witter Hotel all day Tuesday, Sept. 28th, and he makes no charges for a friendly visit. Hours 9 a. m. to 7:30 p. m.

Scene from "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" Daily's Theatre, Sept. 11th.

Metropolitan Building built with dimes of poor

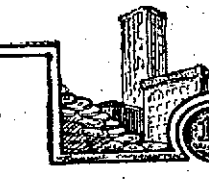

Your chance begins as soon as you believe you have a chance. One willing and courageous human plentifully mixed with energy and stirred with ambition—that's the recipe.

There's plenty of room for a sky scraping career most men are building shanty lives.

Forewarned—Forearmed.
A girl had a proposal of marriage Sunday night, and asked a week to consider it before answering. She then organized her self into an investigating committee and began taking testimony from married ladies of her acquaintance. The first one she visited used to be a belle and the most admired girl in town before she married six years before. The cross-examination brought out the fact that she had six children, did all her own work, including washing and ironing, and had a good job in a law office. Another woman whom she visited told teaching school three years ago to marry "the handsomest" but best dressed man in town and she was supporting him. A third didn't dare say her soul was her own when her husband was around, tho she used to write some lovely essays when she was at school on the "virtue of women's" and the fourth woman she visited was divorced. After visiting them and summing up the evidence, she went home and wrote the young man. She will be married next month.

The six direct current electrical generators now being installed in the power house of the Ford Motor Co. at Detroit are likely to take their place in the "manufacturing hall of fame" alongside the Panama canal locks and other "biggest" manufactured things. The total weight of each generator, including the shaft is figured at 135 tons. If one of the generators were placed before a two and one-half story house of average dimensions, the lower stories would be hidden from view, for the frame of the generator itself reaches from the sidewalk to the bottom of the attic windows and would more than span the front of the house. Some of the bolts used weigh 500 pounds each and some of the nuts 30 pounds each.

SAYS the man, who's learned
How good rich tobacco really is:
"Tie your bull on the outside and come on in where the good tobacco is. You've been wasting your opportunity with unnecessary grinding and spitting; rest your jaws and content your soul with a little nibble of the Real Tobacco Chew."
A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.
ASK YOUR DEALER FOR W-B CUT CHEWING TOBACCO. IT IS THE NEW! "REAL TOBACCO CHEW"—CUT LONG SHRECK
Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it and you had the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.
The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit for much.
One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.
"Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste."

WILL BOW TO U. S.

GERMANY AND GREAT BRITAIN
TO MAKE CONCESSIONS TO UNITED STATES.

MEDIATION HOPE IS SEEN

Modification of Blockade and Submarine Warfare May Lead Wilson Again to Offer His Good Offices.

Washington, Sept. 1.—State department officials expressed the opinion that the way is being cleared rapidly for another effort by the United States to get England and Germany to agree to the principle of the freedom of the seas with direct bearing on the reopening of neutral trade with Germany.

A long cable message was received by Secretary of State Lansing from Ambassador Gerard relating to the Arabic case and was of sufficient importance to require a visit of Mr. Lansing to the White House. Mr. Lansing declined to state even the substance of the cablegram, but it is known that it contained a discussion of internal politics at Berlin, and the Arabic case, and the general prospects of the terms on which an agreement between the United States and Germany might be predicated.

After the receipt of this dispatch from Mr. Gerard, the British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice called on the state department trade advisors and on other officials of the state department.

After these two developments, it was indicated very strongly that Great Britain was willing to modify the orders in council so far as they affected the export of dry goods from Germany and Holland to Rotterdam under contract for shipment to the United States.

State department authorities, reading between the lines of what they have from the German foreign office, seem to think that Germany will frankly disavow the act of the commander of the submarine who attacked the Arabic if he did not give the warning required by international law and demanded by this government. They say that a great point will be thus gained and that the next step would be easy for Germany to abandon all attacks on unarmed merchant vessels. This would pave the way for a second suggestion to Great Britain by the United States to treat the blockade as a temporary measure.

That note was a distinct offer of mediation, provided that England and Germany would make mutual concessions.

RUSS FLEE GRODNO FORTRESS

Military Property Being Removed, Says Dispatch—Olita Stronghold Is Taken.

Petrograd, Aug. 30.—Grodno is being evacuated. Only sufficient troops to delay the German advances are now in the fortress. Military property has been removed.

Olita, a Russian fortress guarding the Niemen river between Kovno and Grodno, has been captured by the Germans. The general staff reported at Berlin. The general staff reported at Berlin. The general staff reported at Berlin.

For the second time the German admiralty issued a statement at Berlin declaring that the Russian admiralty claim that the battle cruiser Moskva and other German warships had been destroyed in the Gulf of Riga, is a "fake."

"No such battle took place," the admiralty said. "The Russians allege that they captured some German ships. They probably mean those steamers captured by the Germans and sunk to block the passage."

THE HOLE IN THE DOUGHNUT

TRY TO WRECK TRAIN AUSTRIANS IN RETREAT

PLOT TO BLOW UP EXPLOSIVES IS BALKED.

Rails Tampered With—Employees of the Aetna Works Near Gary, Ind., Make Discovery.

Gary, Ind., Aug. 31.—An apparent attempt to wreck a train carrying enough gunpowder to blow up the whole city of Gary was discovered on Saturday at the height of excitement which has developed with the secret agitation and spying revealed in the search for the motive and murderers in the case of the Aetna Powder works.

Fifty feet north of the Aetna Powder works, three miles east of Gary, the storm center of plots against shipment of war munitions to England, an effort to derail a train due to leave the works Sunday for the East was discovered.

The rivets of a plate holding together the ends of two rails had been pried or chiseled out and the end of one of the rails had been crowded about six inches out of line.

The discovery was made before the train started by Anton Slazotski, an employee of the powder works. Armed guards are marching about the plants and spies are at work for both parties of the European strife.

Eighty per cent of the Gary population is composed of foreigners, almost all of whom have personal and warm interests in the outcome, and everybody in Gary suspects his neighbor of being a foreign secret service agent. Excitement is running high in the remote quarters of the city, and numerous lights and firearm scrapes have followed the disclosures and conjectures.

Acton, Mass., Aug. 31.—The glazing mill of the American Powder company was blown up at 3:30 o'clock Sunday. Murray Ballou, president of the company, would not attempt to place the responsibility. Armed guards are now patrolling the vicinity of the mills.

ARABIC'S FOE SUNK

GERMANY CANNOT NOW EXPLAIN
SUBMARINE COMMANDER'S
ACTION.

DESTROYED BY THE BRITISH

Dispatch From Liverpool Says U-Boat Was Sunk by Patrol Ship and the Entire Crew Perished—Settlement of Affairs Believed Near.

Liverpool, Sept. 2.—The German submarine which sank the White Star liner Arabic was sunk the following day by a British patrol boat. This fact was confirmed here. While the submarine was engaged in trying to hold up the Leyland liner Nicolson, a British patrol boat came up and shelled the submarine. All the members of the submarine's crew lost their lives.

This incident, coupled with the activities of the British navy, while comparatively insignificant from a military viewpoint, will probably prove of marked importance in smoothing the way to a friendly settlement of this phase of the controversy between the United States and Germany.

Everyone here believes that, except as to minor details, the settlement of the Arabic affair will reduce the Lusitania dispute to the status of a moot case.

The sinking of the offending U-boat, which seems to have been accompanied by the loss of her commander and crew, removes the one obstacle to fulfillment of the pledge of the German imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, to give the United States "complete satisfaction" in case it was proved that the Arabic was sunk without warning by a German submarine.

This obstacle was the implied intention of knowing Germany's good faith in demanding responsibility by punishing under naval law the commander immediately responsible for the destruction of the Arabic.

WHITTET TO RETAIN POSITION AS EXPERT

WILL BE PAID HIS SALARY OUT OF THE GENERAL APPROPRIATION.

$5,000 GRANT IS REPEALED

Money Voted for Executive's Assistant Inductively Annulled by Solons, Is Discovered—To Get $4,500 a Year.

Madison.—Lawrence C. Whittet of Edgerton, speaker of the lower house of the legislature, will continue to serve as expert financial assistant to the governor, notwithstanding the discovery that the section of the law appropriating $5,000 a year to the governor to pay the expense of such an employee was inadvertently repealed by a law passed later in the session.

The provision of the law authorizing the governor to employ a financial expert to keep a check on public expenditures was not affected by the section repealed, and hence the governor will continue to employ Mr. Whittet and instead of paying him as an expert, will pay him out of the general appropriation made for the executive department, which is $18,000 for the current year and $18,000 for the next fiscal year.

After it was discovered that the section of the law carrying the $5,000 annual appropriation for the financial expert had been repealed, the governor decided that although the appropriation was not made during the coming two years he had at his request about 20 per cent from that made for his predecessor in office, the appropriation was still large enough to enable him to meet all demands and also retain Mr. Whittet at a salary of $4,500 a year, with an allowance of $500 a year for expenses. Mr. Whittet said he would continue to serve as financial expert.

One of the state departments discovered that the section of the law appropriating $5,000 for a financial expert had been repealed by a law passed later in the session.

It is believed that the electrical equipment of the truck became short circuited and sparks which resulted when the tank set it to the gasoline fumes. HARPER UPHOLDS USE OF ANTI TOXIN

STATE HEALTH BOARD HEAD SAYS THERE SHOULD BE NO DIPHTHERIA DEATHS.

Madison.—To dispel an impression that prevails to a certain extent that the use of antitoxin in diphtheria is dangerous, and at the same time to call attention to the practice of certain physicians in the state who, when they have failed in the timely use of antitoxin, blame it for the evil consequences resulting from their failure, Dr. C. A. Harper of the state board of health gives out the following statement:

NOT DANGEROUS TO HEART

Statement Makes Defense Against Charges of Some Physicians—Treatment Should be Administered Early.

"With the present knowledge of diphtheria there should be no deaths from this disease if the nature of the ailment is discovered soon after the clinical symptoms become manifest and antitoxin is freely used. In some few cases the physicians have stated that the death was due to heart failure as a result of administering antitoxin. This is not true. Either the physician was not called early enough so that the antitoxin could be administered in the early stages of the disease, or through the neglect of the physician in attendance did not use antitoxin as promptly as he should.

"In every case of diphtheria antitoxin should be used during the first day, if possible. If this is done complete recovery can be assured. There is no evidence for the statement that antitoxin depresses the heart, or is dangerous in any state of diphtheria."

GERMANY AND GREAT BRITAIN
TO MAKE CONCESSIONS TO

MEDIATION HOPE IS SEEN

Modification of Blockade and Submarine Warfare May Lead Wilson Again to Offer His Good Offices.

Washington, Sept. 1.—State department officials expressed the opinion that the way is being cleared rapidly for another effort by the United States to get England and Germany to agree to the principle of the freedom of the seas with direct bearing on the re-opening of neutral trade with Germany.

A long cable message was received by Secretary of State Lansing from Ambassador Gerard relating to the Arabic case and was of sufficient importance to require a visit of Mr. Lansing to the White House. Mr. Lansing declined to state even the subject matter of the cablegram, but it is known that it contained a discussion of internal politics at Berlin, and the Arabic case, and the general prospects of the terms of an agreement between the United States and Germany might be proffered.

After the receipt of this dispatch from Mr. Gerard, the British ambassador, Mr. Cecil Spring-Rice called on the state department twice and on other officials of the state department.

After these two developments, it was indicated very strongly that Great Britain was willing to modify the orders in council so far as they affected the export of steel stuffs from Germany and millions of dollars worth of goods held at Rotterdam under contract for shipment to the United States.

State department authorities, reading between the lines of what they have from the German foreign office, seem to think that Germany will frankly disavow the act of the commander of the submarine which attacked the Arabic if he did not give the warning required by international law and demanded by this government. They say that a great point will be thus gained and that the next step would be easy for Germany to abandon all attacks on unarmed merchant ships.

ARABIC'S FOE SUNK

GERMANY CANNOT NOW EXPLAIN
ACTION.

DESTROYED BY THE BRITISH

Dispatch From Liverpool Says U-Boat Was Shelled by Patrol Ship and the Entire Crew Perished—Settlement of Affair Believed Near.

Liverpool, Sept. 2.—The German submarine which sank the White Star liner Arabic was sunk the following day by a British patrol boat. This fact was confirmed here. While the submarine was engaged in trying to hold up the Leyland liner Nicolson, a British patrol boat came up and shelled the submarine. All the members of the submarine's crew lost their lives.

This incident, coupled with the activities of the British navy, while comparatively insignificant from a military viewpoint, will probably prove of marked importance in smoothing the way to a friendly settlement between the United States and Germany.

Everyone here believes that, except as to minor details, the settlement of the Arabic affair will reduce the Lusitania dispute to the status of a moot case.

The sinking of the offending U-boat, which seems to have been accompanied by the loss of her commander and crew, removes the one obstacle to fulfillment of the pledge of the German imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, to give the United States "complete satisfaction" in the case.

It was proved that the Arabic was sunk without warning by a German submarine.

This obstacle was the implied intention of showing Germany's good faith in disclaiming responsibility by punishing under naval law the commander immediately responsible for the destruction of the Arabic.

WHITTET TO RETAIN POSITION AS EXPERT

WILL BE PAID HIS SALARY OUT OF THE GENERAL APPROPRIATION.

$5,000 GRANT IS REPEALED

Money Voted for Executive's Assistant Inadvertently Annulled by Solons, Is Discovered—To Get $4,500 a Year.

Madison.—Lawrence C. Whittet of Edgerton, speaker of the lower house of the legislature, will continue to serve as expert financial assistant to the governor, notwithstanding the discovery that the section of the law appropriating $5,000 a year to the governor to pay the expense of such an employee was inadvertently repealed by a law passed later in the session.

The provision of the law authorizing the governor to employ a financial expert to keep a check on public expenditures was not affected by the section repealed, and hence the governor will continue to employ Mr. Whittet and instead of paying him as at first intended, will pay him out of the general appropriation made for the executive department, which is $16,000 for the current year and $18,000 for the next fiscal year.

After it was discovered that the section of the law carrying the $5,000 annual appropriation for the financial expert had been repealed, the governor decided that although the appropriations for his department during the coming two years had at his request been cut 50 per cent from the original appropriation in effect, the appropriation was still large enough to enable him to meet all demands and also retain Mr. Whittet at a salary of $4,500 a year, with an allowance of $500 a year for expenses. Mr. Whittet said he would continue to serve as financial expert.

One of the state departments discovered that the section of the law appropriating $5,000 for a financial expert had been repealed by a law passed later in the session.

NOT DANGEROUS TO HEART

Statement Makes Defense Against Charges of Some Physicians—Treatment Should Be Administered Early.

Madison.—To dispel an impression that prevails to a certain extent that the use of antitoxin in diphtheria is dangerous, and at the same time to call attention to the practice of certain physicians in the state who, when they have failed in the timely use of antitoxin, blame it for the evil consequences resulting from their failure, Dr. C. "In some few cases the physicians have stated that the death was due to heart failure as a result of administering antitoxin. This is not true. Early the physician was not called early enough so that the antitoxin could be administered in the early stages of the disease, or through neglect the physician in attendance did not use antitoxin as promptly as he should.

"In every case of diphtheria antitoxin should be used during the first day, if possible. If this is done complete recovery can be assured.
